Dear Colleagues

After a year bounteous in work and events, it is a particular pleasure for me to extend invitations to the traditional Autumn Meeting of the EFR in this December season. This, already the third such symposium in the fall, is a cross-section of the activities throughout the brief associated term of the European Federation for ColoRectal Cancer. With speakers from 11 countries, there is a bird's eye view of new therapeutic strategies, not to mention guidelines for treating the second most common tumors in Europe. We believe that Vienna is, scientifically speaking, good soil for establishing working groups that are going to come to grips with the individual diagnostic and therapeutic key issues. In the final analysis, we are all pursuing a common goal, that of elaborating joint studies under the auspices of the EFR on yet unsolved questions in treatment concepts for colorectal cancer.

Besides these vital medical tasks, however, the accompanying program ought to help deepen friendships, provide opportunities for making new friends, and simply come closer to one another in the great united Europe. The pre-Christmastime in Vienna replete with characteristic Christmas markets ought to lend this meeting a setting redolent with atmosphere.

Sincerely,

Béla Teleky
President of the EFR
